RULES OF TEXAS HOLD'EM

Texas Hold'em is broken into several hands of poker and each hand is composed of four different betting rounds. Each round allows you to make one of several betting choices. When all rounds have been played for each hand, the player with the best hand using his/her pocket cards and community board cards wins the pot. The poker match ends when one player wins all the money on the table, which usually occurs after several hands have been dealt.

BETTING ROUNDS

Round 1: Small Blind and Big Blind are played. The dealer deals each player two cards. The dealer is the player marked by a letter "d". The player left of the player who posted the big blind will be allowed to make a betting choice. Once all players have the same bet amount posted the round will end.

Round 2 (Commonly known as the "Flop"): Three cards are dealt to the community face up. The player left of the dealer is the first to bet. Once all players have the same bet amount posted the round will end.

Round 3 (Commonly known as the "Turn"): One more card is dealt to the community face up. The player left of the dealer is the first to bet. Once all players have the same bet amount posted the round will end.

Round 4 (Commonly known as the "River"): The last card is dealt to the community face up. The player left of the dealer is the first to bet. Once all players have the same bet amount posted the round will end.

Show Down (Not a Hand Round): At the end of round 4, all players still in the hand show their cards. The strongest hand wins the pot. A new hand is then started with round 1.

BETTING CHOICES

Bet: You can post a starting bet at least equal to the limit value for that round. If the table is in a No Limit setting, then this bet may be as much as your available funds. The money bet will be subtracted from your funds.

Call: You match the highest bet that is currently on the table. The money called is subtracted from your total funds.

Raise: You can raise the current bet at least equal to the limit value for that round. If the table is in a No Limit setting, then this bet may be as much as your available funds. The money bet is subtracted from your total funds.

Check: If no bet has occurred, you may pass on the betting phase. You must call or raise to stay in the game if another player makes a bet.

Fold: You may choose to not bet anymore in this hand. You will be removed from play and not return to play until the beginning of the next hand. No money will be subtracted from your funds.
